By Evgenia Günter Drawings by Ekaterina Zhirkova

We decided to check how princesses used to live in various countries. How did they dress, what did they love or hate, what did they study, whom were they afraid of, how did they spent their time? TELEPHONE: the story By Natalia and Vasily Volkov Drawings by Liza Kazinskaya

Today the telephone has become a familiar and necessary thing in our daily life. But it was not always so. How did people manage to communicate long distance before its invention? Who invented it and what happened next? How was the first cable laid along the bottom of the ocean and why were young ladies needed at telephone exchanges? The book tells it all: the story of the telephone up to the cell phone.

Chapter PHONE BEFORE PHONE

It's impossible to imagine life without cell phones. We are used to sending messages, calling each other, chatting watching TikTok 24 hours a day. But it wasn't always like this. One hundred years ago even having a telephone set in an apartment was rare, and portable phones and video calls were something unimaginable!

SPEAKERPHONE

In the ancient times people had many ways of sending messages to each other. For example, if an enemy attacked, people would light fires on signal towers and sound bells calling warriors to arms. But there was a problem: not only friends would receive these messages, but enemies too! Then how could people send a private message? They used messen gers – sometimes mounted ones – and pigeons. But they had to wait for hours, even days for a reply. Only after many scientific breakthroughs people found a way to communicate faster and easie

How do you send messages without messengers? Ancient Romans inventer a very clever way to do this. They took common barrels filled with water and created a «water telegraph». Historian Polybius mentioned this invention being used when Romans fought a war with a mighty African state of Carthage (III–II cc B.C.).

to send a signal from one came to another Romans used identical bar-rels of water. Each had a bobber inside with identical tablets attached to it, each on a different depth. One camp lit a torch. The other signaled by litting one, too. After that both camps opened the valves of barrels simultaneously Then they signaled with a torch to close valves. This way water in both barrels was on the same level, where the tablet with the message - for example attack! - was. This way both camp could attack simultaneously. Maybe that's why Romans have won and stroyed Carthage

HIDE-AND-SEEK PICTURE BOOKS

The inquisitive little pair of mice, named Timka and Tinka, travel through time together with the readers. They have visited the Stone Age, ancient Egypt and Rome and medieval Europe. Here they come to an Egyptian school, look at how a Roman aqueduct is built, and even take part in a tournament. The detailed pictures explain how people used to live in the past, what they were dressed like and what they did. Each page has hidden objects to find. When you have discovered them all you can read about them in the margins.
